Description: 2 leaves, consecutive - Not bound. - The Cistercian abbey of Hautecombe, diocese of Geneva, suppressed in 1792; acquired in or after 1796 by Giacinto della Torre, P.S.A. (1747-1814), canon and later archbishop of Turin 1805-14, who gave it to the biblioteca del Semainario metropolitano, Turin, the library was dispersed c. 1954; the present two leaves were bought by George A. Poole in 1954 from C.A. Stonehill; acquired by the Lilly Library with the Poole Collection in 1958. - Halporn 1961, pp. 224-27; Faye and Bond 1962, p. 180; Leclercq 1964, p. 217; Grégoire 1966, p. 72; Ferrari and Rouse 1991, p. 93; Bondeelle-Souchier 1991, p. 133; Shailor 1992, p. 291; Bischoff 1998, p. 137, no. 643; Baroffio 1999, p. 25.

Notes:-By the fifteenth century the manuscript had apparently lost a leaf or two at the beginning, and the stained and darkened f. 1r here was the first to survive. Around 1796 given to the seminary library in Turin, where it was kept as ms 15, 72 leaves, subsequently disbound (Leclercq 1951, p. 76). 61 leaves are in Beinecke Library, as Marston MS 151, beginning at the point where f.2v here breaks off (Lutz 1972; Shailor 1992, pp. 286-92). Six leaves are in the Detroit Public Library (Faye and Bond 1962, p. 297), and one leaf is in the University of California in Los Angeles (Ferrari And Rouse 1991, p. 93). Two leaves remain unaccounted for.

Title: Homilarium

Title: Homilia Bede in fest Annunciationis Homily

Language(s): Latin

Notes: Extracts from Bede's Homiliae 1:3 (Gregoire 1966, p. 78, no. 11; Hurst 1960, pp. 14-15, lines 9-136). The volume from which these leaves come was the oldest known to Gregoire, although he did not search comprehensively. A late medieval note across the lower margin gives the by-then missing opening of the homily, linked by a little tie-mark to the top of the page. Rubric identifying the text as Bede's homily is in a much later hand (19th c?).

f. 1r Carolingian minuscule, some later textual corrections and additions; the stained and darkened fol. 1r here has a late medieval note in the lower margin that gives the by-then missing opening of the homily, linked by a little tie-mark to the top of the pag
